Studies from the Book of Romans

Lesson 20

Romans 16:1–27

Personal Greetings and Conclusion

Of the sixty-six books of the Bible, and arguably all Christian books ever written, the Book of Romans is perhaps the most powerful and authoritative book in the Christian world. It was the book that led the early church father Augustine to salvation. It was the inspiration for men such as Martin Luther, who began the Protestant Reformation, and John Wesley, who led the great revival in England. Throughout the centuries it has been a light to open the eyes and point the way for all who seek to find the love and grace of a forgiving God who invites sinners to come to new life in Jesus Christ.

Paul closes his epistle to the Romans with personal commendations and greetings, a final warning regarding false teachers, the promise of spiritual victory and a heart-felt benediction.

Read Romans 16:1–27.

Here we get an close up glimpse into those faithful Christians who worked alongside Paul in the ministry and the gratitude he had for each one's contribution. He greets them by name, acknowledging their gifts and service on behalf of Christ. We see Paul's heart and the fact that what he has written in this letter goes beyond doctrinal teaching; it is the reality of the Christian life! The individuals he mentions are those he knew well because he worked hand in hand with them to advance the message of the Gospel. It is clear that he valued each person and was exceedingly grateful for their friendship and fellowship in the faith. This is his moment to recognize them so that they would be acknowledged by their brethren in Rome.

Paul's list of commendations in verses 1–16, consists of twenty-six who are mentioned by name, plus two who are not mentioned by name (Rufus' mother, v. 13; and Nereus' sister, v. 15). There are Jews and Gentiles from all walks of life. Some are persons of distinction, others are slaves, and one third are women.

Look closer:

Read the list in vv. 1–16 through a second time. All were important to Paul, but some are given specific recognition. In the space provide on the next page, write down those individuals who Paul singles out and make note of what he says about each one. Think about the influence each life had on Paul and the lasting impact of their contribution to the body of Christ today, some two thousand years later. (As you have time, you may want to look up these men and women in your Bible concordance or dictionary to gain further information.)
